

Exploring the Politics of Time, Disability, and Collective Accountability in Academe

Dr. Margaret Price

February 7, 2025

11:00am Mountain Time

1:00pm Eastern Time

ASL and CART accessibility services will be provided

Drawing upon her award-winning book Mad at School, and the newly released Crip Spacetime: Access, Failure, and Accountability in Academic Life, Dr. Margaret Price argues for a turn toward collective accountability in order to make academe more accessible for all marginalized persons. Rejecting individual accommodation as a means to access, Dr. Price draws upon established work in Black Feminist Studies and disability studies to argue for the value of collectivity and gathering.

In this talk, Dr. Price focuses particularly on the politics of time, presenting her concept of the “accommodations loop” to explain why individual accommodations are not simply inefficient, but systemically harmful.

She closes with a discussion of accountability and gathering in order to point the way toward more sustainable and restorative ways of moving together in academic spacetimes.

the Prentice Institute for Global Population and Economy

Office of the Provost
Office of the Vice Provost EDI
Faculty of Arts & Science
Department of Sociology

Sociology of Disability
Research Cluster

Learn More
& Register

